ROSSLYN PACKING EMPLOYEES STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUT

Walkout of 35 Follows
Dismissal of Six; Join
Union on Quitting.

Walkout of thirty-five employees of the Rosslyn Packing Company, Rosslyn, Va., followed the dismissal of six employees of the Cudahy Packing Company sausage department yesterday, marking the first packer-labor dispute to strike Washington in some time.

At the Central Labor Union meeting in Musicians' Hall last night, labor leaders reported the Cudahy Company had locked out six butchers in violation of an agreement which delegates claimed was made last October to remain effective until the close of the fiscal year.

Joseph E. Cushing, manager of the local Cudahy branch, said last night the company's agreement with the men had been one of a week-to-week nature. He attached little importance to the company's dismissal of the sausage butchers.

The walkout of the employees of the Rosslyn Packing Company, according to reports at the labor meeting, followed the company's attempt to effect a 30 per cent reduction in wages. The men refused the cut and after walking out, joined the union. They are understood to have been previously nonunion members.

The Central Labor Union endorsed for United States Marshal of the District, Jacob W. Starr of the Federal Employers' Union. N. A. James presided.

BRITAIN'S POSITION IS ENDANGERED BY STRIKE OF MINERS

gle, and since the end of the conflict have made the most intelligent and far-reaching efforts to recover their old situation. Taxation has reached unheard of limits, there has been every sort of sacrifice and a demonstration of British skill alike in political and diplomatic fields, which can have no parallel even in British history. If only this skill had been supported by combined effort at home, if only there had been a little luck abroad, Britain would be on a fair way to recovery.

But luck has plainly failed Britain. Since the armistice the conditions in Egypt manifestly have been made worse. Mesopotamia has been an enormous drain upon British resources, and finally, Ireland has been a terrible drain and a source of infinite injury. Added to this has been the ever-growing indication that British labor had no intention of sharing in the sacrifices which were necessary if Britain were to recover its old position. This has already been demonstrated in several general strikes in the past and now finds final proof in the present crisis.

A coal strike paralyzes the most important source of British prosperity, both because so much of its domestic life is dependent upon coal and because coal exports are one of the chief sources of national income. The brief strike of some months ago dealt a terrible blow to British prosperity, because it gave America a chance to export vast amounts of coal and swamp the European market.

U. S. Is Committed

From this invasion the British have not yet recovered and any protraction of the present strike means a new American invasion with still more disastrous consequences.

All this labor paralyzes the most important source of British prosperity, both because so much of its domestic life is dependent upon coal and because coal exports are one of the chief sources of national income. The brief strike of some months ago dealt a terrible blow to British prosperity, because it gave America a chance to export vast amounts of coal and swamp the European market.

Encourages Irish

As to the political situation, the strike comes at the moment when the Irish situation is unsettled and must encourage the Irish to new demands, although there is present indication that any moderate proposals will be listened to. It must encourage the Germans, who are still defiant and refuse to meet the reparations demands. With Britain paralyzed and British domestic difficulties mounting, no one can expect the British to support or even approve a forward march in Germany. What possible chance can British industry have in competition with Germany, for example, where the wages have been reduced and the hours of labor increased?

Position at Stake

But, after all, the economic is the most important aspect of the new struggle. In a measure the outcome of the battle may determine whether Britain can regain her old position in the world, or must resign it, not as a direct consequence of German attack, but as an indirect consequence of the war and through the successful assertion of the laboring classes of a right to live at a fixed standard, irrespective of the cost of production to their country either industrially or politically.

And in the United States the lesson which the struggle teaches will not be lost in the great railway debate which is only now just beginning. In all ways, therefore, the present test in the United Kingdom must prove a landmark in industrial and economic history.

STATE BUILDING PLAN SUPPORTED

Presidents of Various Societies Promise to Attend Meeting Tomorrow.

Assurances from presidents of the various State societies that they will be present at the meeting tomorrow night for the purpose of causing each of the States to erect a building in the District were received yesterday by Col. Robert N. Harper, chairman of the committee.

These calls were in response to the letter sent out by Col. Harper inviting the State societies to support a conference to lay out a comprehensive program for putting over this project, which has been fostered by the Chamber of Commerce since 1908.

Commissioner James F. Oyster has before him for consideration the reports he requested of Maj. Harry L. Gessford, superintendent of police, and Chief George Watson, of the fire department, as to the departments' equipment.

The police department recently purchased several new revolvers of higher caliber than are now in use and distributed them among the precincts. It was indicated yesterday that efforts are being made to equip the entire police department with the new weapons.

East Sections of City Urged to Join Forces

A resolution asking the Commissioners to line Massachusetts avenue in the section of Stanton Park with electric lights was adopted last night at a meeting of the Stanton Park Citizens' Association at the Peabody School.

George Judd spoke on the importance of uniting the people of the northeast and the people of the southeast for the common welfare of both sections of the city.

Girls Plan "College Day"

Plans for a "college day" in Washington high schools, when the members of the senior class at Goucher College will speak of the life and work of the college girls, were made at the annual dinner of the Goucher College Club of Washington held last night at the Y. W. C. A.

The date is undecided, but the plan of the club is to encourage more high school students to attain to higher education.

REBUILT SCHOOL TO BE MEMORIAL OF LATE CARDINAL

Drive for St. Mary's Industrial Institution to Start Today.

Formal announcement that the rebuilding of St. Mary's Industrial School is to be a memorial to the late James Cardinal Gibbons was made by Bishop Owen B. Corrigan, administrator of the arch diocese, who spoke before a mass meeting of 600 workers of the St. Mary's $250,000 campaign at Carroll Hall last night. The drive begins today and ends April 11.

Bishop Corrigan told of the special interest Cardinal Gibbons had in the school and declared it was the last business matter the prelate spoke of before his death.

"His eminence entered into this movement heart and soul," said the Bishop. "Sometimes ago he gave $25,000 to the campaign and if he had not died I know he would have added to it. The weaker he became the more interest he evinced in the drive."

"He didn't talk much about business, but about a week before his death he asked me 'How is the campaign coming along?'"

"Whilst he lived it was his work; as long as he lived there was no question of a memorial. Now we want to continue the good work as a memorial to him. What greater memorial can we build than an institution which was so near and dear to his heart."

"Some time before his last illness his eminence wrote: 'I may not live to see this temple rebuilt, but I shall be happy if I see the material assembled for the work.' He has not lived to see the temple rebuilt, but he knew that the work of assembling it was in the hands of his loyal friends."

Brother Paul, superintendent of the school, also spoke, telling of the work done by the institution. He stated that since the school was destroyed by fire in 1915, which forced them to house the boys in temporary buildings, 2,500 applications for admittance have been rejected.

W. Gwynn Gardiner, former District Commissioner, was another speaker. He is a member of the executive committee of the drive.

Algernon S. Gardiner, president of the Standards Savings Bank, presided.
